Cooperation has become increasingly important for rural actors. The vast experience capitalised by LEADER shows that cooperation is a mechanism that can effectively help rural areas to jointly imagine and share new solutions to address common issues.

The main difficulty identified by the Local Action Groups and the rural networks is the little knowledge of the implementation of LEADER cooperation in the Member States, which complicates the search for partners.

This first part of this seminar will allow to discuss and better understand the functioning of the cooperation in different European countries, during a plenary session but also in regional and thematic workshops.

The workshops will give the occasion to the participants to obtain information that matches their specific expectations, development strategies and local projects.

Setting up a cooperation project, especially transnational, requires good methodological bases. The thematic workshops of the morning will provide the opportunity to acquire or reinforce the knowledge required to carry out a cooperation project, particularly in Europe.

A practical exercise of 'speed dating' will validate these theoretical achievements by facilitating the meeting of possible French and European partners and thus laying the foundations for future cooperation projects.
